Dactinomycin is an antineoplastic agent that inhibits DNA, RNA and protein synthesis. It is used in treatment protocols for many cancers including gestational trophoblastic neoplasia, rhabdomyosarcoma and Wilms tumour (nephroblastoma).

General description

Dactinomycin is an antineoplastic agent that inhibits DNA, RNA and protein synthesis. It is used in treatment protocols for many cancers including gestational trophoblastic neoplasia, rhabdomyosarcoma and Wilms tumour (nephroblastoma).

Recommendations

Section

Cytotoxic medicines

Parenteral > General injections > IV: 500 µg in vial powder for injection

Indications

- Malignant trophoblastic neoplasms of placenta
- Rhabdomyosarcoma primary site
- Malignant neoplasms of kidney, except renal pelvis
- Unspecified malignant neoplasms of ill-defined or unspecified sites